Train Enthusiast's Video Diary 2017-04-23 WB

On Sunday 23rd April 2017, we joined fellow boat, steam and train enthusiasts attending the second day of the South Australian Wooden Boat Festival at the River Port of Goolwa.

This event included a large array of activities and displays including a focus on steam, motor, wind and person powered wooden boats; many, if not most, having some age and interesting history.

This video contains snippets of the wooden boats on display, in action, and other festival support activities.

This video was rendered in 4K.

On Sunday 23rd April 2017, we joined fellow boat, steam and train enthusiasts attending the second day of the South Australian Wooden Boat Festival at the River Port of Goolwa.

This event included a large array of activities and displays including a focus on steam, motor, wind and person powered wooden boats; many, if not most, having some age and interesting history.

A unique fact at the River Port of Goolwa is that people can, at the water's edge, take a ride on a steam driven paddle boat and/or on a steam locomotive hauled train. Further to this, that same train can convey people to nearby Victor Harbor via Middleton and Port Elliot, where a horse drawn tram ride can be taken across the wooden causeway at Victor Harbor out to Granite Island and return.

This video contains snippets of P.S. Oscar "W" at Goolwa, SteamRanger's Rx207 steam locomotive hauling 'The Cackle Train' between Goolwa and Victor Harbor, and the Horse Drawn Trams at Victor Harbor.
